STEVENS, VICTIM OF HOLY WAR

General, stood as if transfixed. Stevens, resourceful to the last, stopped his chase of Chuang, but before he could turn to meet the attack in the rear Chun's revolver cracked twice in rapid succession and the diplomat dropped to the ground.

The assassin had not time to shoot again, for before his weapon, pointed at the wounded man on the ground, could empty forth its contents he was struck on the head by Harry Sexton, deputy assessor in the police department, and knocked down. The revolver dropped from the man's hands, and before he could recover it Sexton had him fast.

Chuang, in the meantime, wounded and bleeding, was making a desperate effort to lose himself in the crowd. Though badly wounded he was making good use of his legs, but was quickly intercepted by Policemen Edward Owens and John McGrath.

The crowd, which up to the present had remained inert and almost stupefied by the suddenness of the shooting, now broke loose. With cries of anger they advanced to where Sexton was holding the trembling Chun and made insistent demands to have him lynched. The general belief was that a white man had been shot down by a Japanese and the people swarmed around Sexton and his prisoner, hooting, cursing and yelling. Sexton ran Chun, trembling for his life, under the ferry building and there turned over him and his revolver to Policemen Owens and McGrath.

Chuang, the wounded Korean, and Stevens were taken to the harbor emergency hospital, followed by a crowd, but the largest crowd followed Chun, who did the shooting.

Cries of "Lynch the Jap!"

Loud cries were made to "lynch the Jap," and the temper of the crowd finally grew to such a pitch that the policemen forced their prisoner into a run and rushed him to the police station, with the straggling crowd yelling imprecations at him.

The Japanese Consul General was completely lost in the excitement of the moment, but he appeared while the crowd was being quieted and followed Stevens to the harbor emergency hospital. Koike was greatly excited and repeatedly asked that no one but the authorities be allowed to approach Stevens. The latter was the coolest man in the place.

Stevens Remains Cheerful

"I don't feel any pain, he said as he lay on the operating table. 'Is that a bad sign?' Not getting an answer to his questions he lapsed into silence. Later he asked a few questions about his wounds and generally maintained a cheerful demeanor.

The man who shot him was being attended at another table and was being subjected to a steady gaze on the part of the Japanese Consul General. The quiet of the hospital seemed to calm down Koike. In disrobing Stevens the hospital attendants had taken from his necktie a magnificent diamond stick pin. This was thrown carelessly on the heap of blood-stained clothes and was picked up by Koike.

"What shall I do with this?" he asked of Mrs. Kennedy. "It looks rather valuable and should not be left lying around."

"You had better wear it yourself until you can have an opportunity of turning it over to the other party," said Mrs. Kennedy.

Koike contented himself with putting the pin in his pocket. After Stevens had been removed to the hospital he gathered the latter's belongings and made arrangements with the police to have the grips and baggage belonging to Stevens sent to the Fairmont Hotel.

Diplomat Shot Twice

The medical examination showed that both men were seriously and probably fatally wounded. Stevens was shot twice, one bullet smashing his shoulder blade and the other entering the lower part of his back. The wound in the face, caused by the blow from the revolver, was at first taken for a bullet wound, and he had to undergo much painful probing before the surgeons were satisfied that no bullet had lodged there. The Korean was shot in the shoulder, the bullet plowing through the body and coming out above the lung.

one of the assistants in the District Attorney's office, took their statements as they lay at the Central Emergency Hospital. J. S. Ryang, in charge of the Korean mission, acted as interpreter. The following is Chuang's deposition:

"I am 25 years old. I came to America as a student, but had no money. I am now farming. I was in the country and came back five days ago to the city, but could find no work."

"All the world looks on Korea as a low country. I was very sorry to see this. I left my home to study in America and then return to help my country. Since I left conditions have become worse. Japan thinks right is might. It has forced our government to make some treaties, following which the trouble started."

"My brother and relatives have been killed by the Japanese and I have had no power to prevent such deeds. A few days ago Mr. Stevens came to San Francisco and told the press much that was false in saying that the Korean people welcomed the Japanese government. After I saw what Mr. Stevens said I decided to kill him."

"I got a picture of Mr. Stevens and heard he was going to Washington. Knowing he would pass the ferry depot I went there and waited for him. As soon as he came out of the carriage with the Japanese Consul General I went up to him. I tried to shoot him, but the wheel would not turn, so I hit him with the gun and tried to put his eyes out. I then ran away. Then Mr. Stevens shot me in my back. I was alone. I don't know this man Chun. I was very angry and did not eat any breakfast. I agreed with nobody else to go there. My wound is very painful and I wish to die."

Stevens' statement is brief and to the point. It reads:

"My name is Durham White Stevens. I am 55 years of age. My residence is in Seoul, Korea. I am an adviser to the Korean Cabinet, with headquarters in the palace. I came to this city from Yokohama on the Nippon Maru and have been in this city since March 20. I think the shooting was due to political troubles. I never knew these persons before. I only know that last night a committee of the people came to the Fairmont Hotel and assaulted me. They came at me with chairs and struck at me."

"I next saw them this morning as I was getting out of the automobile at the ferry building. One of them rushed at me and struck me in the face. I chased this one and the other shot me. He shot me twice, I think. Somebody knocked the pistol out of his hand. A crowd gathered and that is all."

Later Stevens said: "This is evidently the work of a small band of student agitators in and about San Francisco, who resent the fact that the Japanese have a protectorate over Korea, and believe that I am to some extent responsible for the affairs in their country. They are ignorant of the good work done by the Japanese in Korea, but do know that the government has been reorganized, and they appear to have selected me as a victim for their vengeance and because of my connection with the present government in Korea."

"I had no idea that they had worked themselves up to such a murderous pitch. I thought so little of the assault upon me at the hotel last night that I took no precautions whatever, even to carry a weapon."

"This is a nice way to begin the vacation I had looked forward to with so much pleasure," Stevens added with a smile.

Both the Koreans resided at the Korean mission and have been working as houseboys while pursuing their studies. Later they obtained employment in the country. Neither would admit the other was with him, and each declared there was no conspiracy.

MYSTERIOUS CASE

Chief Taylor is strenuously working on one of the most extraordinary cases ever brought to the attention of the Police Department. It is the case of a woman who gave birth to triplets somewhere in the city during the past two weeks. The parents—the father a Chinese and the mother Hawaiian—do not know where the children are, as the mother is unable to describe the place where she gave birth.

About two weeks ago, the woman was sent to the Maternity Home by her husband in a hack. Since then no word was received from her and this led the husband to look into the matter. He was told that no such woman arrived at the Home. Some time afterward she returned without the expected arrival. She appeared dazed and weak, and was unable to give full account of what had taken place.

Edward L. Loyett, a St. Louis florist, received a second "black-hand" letter demanding $300 on pain of death. In a note to his sister enclosed was a drawing of a coffin with the words: "He will need this if he does not bring the money."

Miss Ella Priscilla Grove, a Chicago teacher, has completed a fast of thirty-one days at Long Beach, Cal.

Ayer's Hair Vigor

A gentleman residing at Dunedin, N.Z., writes under date Jan. 7, 1907:

"It is with gratitude I write you that I have now a splendid head of hair, both thick and very soft, all owing to my having used your wonderful Hair Vigor. I was almost bald headed before I used the Hair Vigor. I still use it once a day, rubbing it well into the roots of the hair. I used to wear a skull-cap, and I am very grateful to Ayer's Hair Vigor for the improvement it has made in my looks."

LINER MANCHURIA

BRINGS GOOD LOAD

Sixty-Three Cabin Passengers on the Pacific Mail Boat for Honolulu.

With 63 cabin passengers for Honolulu, the big liner Manchuria arrived here this morning from San Francisco. Of the 63 only four are stopovers, the rest being regular Honolulu passengers. The trip of the Manchuria down from the Coast was uneventful, the weather being ordinarily good, and there were few heavy seas to contend with.

Walter Dillingham returned from the Coast, where he has been for some time. While in California he has taken a great interest in the polo tournaments at Coronado and will probably have a fund of knowledge of new tricks of the game when the season opens here.

General Richard Henry Pratt, who will stay at Honolulu for some time, is a retired army officer. He served in the Indiana volunteers for a number of years, and was afterwards transferred to the regular army. He retired from active service Feb. 17, 1903. He suggested and organized the Industrial School for Indians in 1879 and was its only superintendent until his retirement. His home is in Carlisle, Pa.

J. S. McCandless returned from the Coast.

Mrs. Lella Seton Wilder was also a passenger.

The Manchuria sails this evening at 5 o'clock for the Orient. She will take on a number of lay-over passengers from this port.

SONS OF THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION

The annual congress of the Sons of the American Revolution will be held at Buffalo, N. Y., on April 30 and May 1. The headquarters will be at the Iroquois hotel. The official bulletin of the society has just been received by the local chapter. Considerable attention is paid in it to Hawaii. Letters from the Hawaiian Society give the information that fourteen new members have been added since the Denver Congress. Regarding Hawaii, the bulletin says:

"We have a greater problem before us, in proportion to our size, than any other society. In that in these islands we have more of a mixed population than in any other State or Territory; and that we are trying in every way to reach the children of the public schools, Japanese, Korean, Chinese, Porto Rican, Spanish, Hawaiian, Italian, and all the others, whose parents were brought here by the planting interests, and who are now by their birthright full fledged eligibles for the suffrage."

"By the observance of our patriotic anniversaries, and the dissemination of patriotic and historical literature we shall hope to inculcate in these children of our 'Happy Isles' that which will make them useful citizens of our great Republic."

"It is not too much to ask that we 'The Cross Ways of the Pacific,' be especially in your care and attention. We are in the position of a buffer between the Asiatic and Caucasian civilization. We do not know how long before this buffer will cease to exist and these islands become the theater for a struggle in which you may assume correctly that the Hawaiian Society of the Sons of the American Revolution will not be found wanting!"

Death of Grace Seabara, an 8-year-old girl in New York, is directly attributable, the doctors say, to the terrifying effects of a "black-hand" letter which she picked up on the doorstep of her home some time ago.
